Many people use dogs to protect their house. Pit bulls and other dogs are very intimidating to people. I don't think that a cat would stop a criminal from entering a house. While a pit bull or any other big dog would have the criminal running away. Dogs are very loyal to their owner while a cat could be placed in a different house and it would be fine. A dog would also wake you up in a fire and a cat would be sneaking its way out of the house.

A dog can also help a human while he is hunting. Dogs will chase after a bird when it falls in the water. Also the dog could scare birds so they fly in the air giving the hunter a good look at a shot. People also train dogs to compete in the great outdoor games on ESPN. Dogs compete against each other in a lot of different events. My favorite event is the long jump. A dog gets going as fast as it can and it runs down a dock, when the dog gets to the end, the dog's trainer throws a rag off the dock and the dog jumps for it in the water.

An indoor cat on the other hand has two jobs during a day, eat and sleep. That is all my cat ever does. If it does happen to be awake, when it is not eating it is crying for more food. My cat is the most annoying animal of all time. Its not that I hate cats it's just being around a dog is ten times better. Cats also use a kitty litter box that always has to be taken care of, and I am the first one always asked to clean it up.

Dogs also like to be walked. Walking a dog is not only good for the dog it is also good for the person who is walking it. While it is not impossible, walking a cat is very rare. Cats are to independent to stay on a leash.

A dog is easier to take on a vacation with the family than a cat. Dogs like traveling in a car a lot more than cats do. Dogs will put there heads out the window or like to sit on your lap. Every time my cat has to be in a car to go to the vet, it wets its self or cries hysterically.
